ACHC and Immunoglobulin National Society Form Partnership

CARY, N.C. – Accreditation Commission for Health Care (ACHC) announced today it is partnering with Immunoglobulin National Society (IgNS), the leading healthcare association dedicated to the advancement of clinical practice for immunoglobulin (Ig) and biologic therapies.

“The benefits of this partnership impact organizations, clinicians, and patients receiving these lifesaving therapies,” said Joseph W. Coyne, ACHC Pharmacy Program Director. “The Immunoglobulin National Society provides comprehensive resources to the Ig therapy clinical community.”

“As the only multidisciplinary, standards-setting organization in the field of Ig therapy, IgNS is committed to advancing clinical practice this highly complex field necessitates,” said Luba Sobolevsky, PharmD, IgCP®, President/CEO of IgNS. “We are excited to commence this partnership and support the specialized field of Ig and biologic therapies. Our collaboration is mutually beneficial to IgNS members, ACHC clients, and our industry as a whole.”

The partnership gives IgNS members special pricing on ACHC Pharmacy Accreditation, including Specialty, Infusion, and PCAB (Compounding Pharmacy) Accreditation. Discounts on select ACHCU educational resources are also available.

About IgNS

The Immunoglobulin National Society (IgNS) is the only national standards-setting organization dedicated to the field of Ig therapy and biologics. IgNS reaches over 35,000 healthcare professionals and over 5,000 patients with the Standards of Practice, specialized education, professional credentialing, and comprehensive resources. The members of IgNS represent leading clinicians, provider organizations, pharmaceutical, biotechnology and device manufacturers, group purchasing organizations, technology and logistics providers, wholesalers and distributors, advocacy, and trade groups, and more.
