ACHC and Qualis Partner to Support Hospices

CARY, N.C. – Accreditation Commission for Health Care (ACHC), a national healthcare accreditor, announced today it is partnering with Qualis, a leading durable medical equipment (DME) management company for the hospice industry.

“ACHC and Qualis are mutually committed to enhancing quality of patient care and optimizing business operations,” said Susan Mills, ACHC Senior Program Director. “Qualis provides innovative solutions to help hospices improve DME services and increase operational efficiency, enabling them to better serve their patients.”

“We are excited to partner with ACHC, a leader in healthcare excellence and integrity,” said Jared Kelley, Qualis CEO. “This partnership represents a pivotal moment for Qualis as we seek to transform DME management in hospice care. By combining ACHC's standards with our DME+ software and services, we will elevate service quality and operational efficiency, leading to better outcomes for our patients, caregivers, and clinical support staff.”

The new collaboration allows Qualis clients to receive preferred pricing on ACHC Accreditation for hospice and DMEPOS services. Discounts are also available on select resources offered by ACHCU, the education division of ACHC.

About Qualis

Qualis is a hospice DME management company that provides solutions to streamline DME processes within hospice organizations. From our industry-leading software, DME+, to time-saving managed services, we promote vendor choice by utilizing a proven nationwide network of DME providers. We also solve challenges related to service and equipment availability, which generates alignment around your hospice's DME priorities.
